

hello@etc.supply
twitter.com/etceteratypeco
instagram.com/etceteratypeco

README

Hi, congrats on the purchase of this super fine (we're biased) typeface! If you have any questions, suggestions, or comments, please send them to hello@etc.supply. We're always improving our work, especially as standards (like variable fonts) evolve along with the tools to make them (Fontlab/Glyphs...). Your purchase means that as ETC fonts are improved, you'll get the updates.

Real quick, and simple, because we want you to get making stuff: you can do almost anything with these fonts, except share the files or allow them to be easily downloaded/accessed. This is all explained in great detail in the EULA, but really, we want you to create great things for many years to come with our typefaces.

The one thing we urge slight caution about is the variable font format. The TTF/OTF files can be installed side-by-side with the variable TTF file (which has the name "Variable" in it, to prevent conflicts). This is still new, so things might be weird in what few applications support them. However, using a variable font on the web is incredibly handy, fun, and efficient! Check out the CSS file included for some quick setup tips. That said, it's risky for ETC to put the power of an easily stolen webfont in your hands, so yield that power with respect and responsibility, please.

Have fun, share what you make with us (submit it to fontsinuse.com and we'll probably give you a big discount coupon code for future orders), and be good to one another.

Sincerely,
Tyler Finck (ETC)